Knauss SCHOOL OF BUSINESS
University of San Diego

October 17, 2026

To Whom It May Concern:

I would like to take this opportunity to recommend Brennan Martin to you, in the highest way possible. I have known Brennan for almost four years now, since he was an outstanding Freshman in my Fall, 2023 BUSN 101 class at USD. He was an excellent student, consistently receiving top grades in the class, and always available to help others as well. I am absolutely confident that he will continue to excel in his future endeavors, and that he is a superb candidate for working with you or your company.

Brennan is especially impressive because, while in class we were studying ways to identify business opportunities, to understand customer needs and to create new businesses that are ethical and sustainable, he was not only absorbing the class but also finding ways to apply it immediately in his school and community. Brennan began by winning the Fowler Business Case Competition (FBCC) that Fall, when he was just a Freshman. By getting to know and creating a partnership with another colleague in class, he immediately found common ground: they had both mowed lawns throughout high school to earn money. From that first encounter came the company they are now launching together—Junior Job Hunt—a business that helps match young people with adult customers who need their odd-job services. To do this he had the daunting task, in the course of just one semester, to visualize every aspect of how to set up a company and then present his ideas to an auditorium full of older students and seasoned businesspeople. Needless to say, he did this beautifully, with a wonderfully positive attitude and amazing courage. He wasn't afraid to take up the mantle of leadership and demonstrate to others just how learning and opportunity can be used to create a better society.

Brennan continued to show me his leadership skills through his ongoing commitment to support other BUSN 101 classes that came about in the years afterward. In spite of their increasingly busy schedules, he and his business partner selflessly came back each semester, repeating themselves (five times, no less) for each Section, to show us all 'how they had done it' and more importantly, where they were taking their company next. Students learned by their example ('if they can do it, I can do it…') and since then, many of them have also won or been finalists in the FBCC, as well as simply advanced with their own businesses. Courage, a love of learning and enthusiasm are indeed contagious.

Aside from being an admirable leader, and excellent student and a businessperson who is advancing by leaps and bounds, Brennan is an excellent person. He listens attentively, is caring and kind to others, and puts real thought into everything he does. He has worked extensively with AI and technology, and is the 'go-to' person for technology in most of his endeavors. I know that he is ethical because, in spite of potentially being in a position to let an early win of the FBCC go to his head, he instead focused on finding ways to help others achieve the same success through mentoring and innumerable small acts of kindness.

He has developed his own approach to life-- something I would describe as intelligent, earnest and well grounded in basic ethical principles. It is a real pleasure to know Brennan, as he approaches almost everything with an interest and enthusiasm that seems to affect others as well.

I would expect Brennan to do an exceptional job in any environment in future, especially a highly challenging one. He has a real drive to succeed, while his quiet appreciation of people leads him to take an interest in all types of individuals, treating them with a natural respect and a caring sense of camaraderie. In addition, he is able to communicate his knowledge clearly and concisely, in a way that is easy for any other person to understand, and makes them want to take up the task or subject with heartfelt interest.

It is a pleasure to recommend Brennan to you, and I wholeheartedly look forward to hearing about his continued successes in the future!

Sincerely,

[redacted]

Dr Alesia Slocum
Clinical Professor of Innovation and Entrepreneurship
Knauss School of Business
University of San Diego